Blast and Fire

ROME, Nov. 30 (AP).—A powerful explosion followed by fire in an eight-floor apartment house today killed 15 persons and injured 65. Five children were among the dead.

The blast tore through the house in the densely populated Prenestino district before dawn, toppling walls and cellings and trapping the sleeping residents in bed.

An arms dealer, whose shop was situated in the building, was held for questioning.

The dealer and his wife were cherged tonight with multiple homicide. The dealer, Alberto Latini, 37, and his wife, Alberta, in whose name the shop was registered, also were charged with causing multiple injuries and provoking a fire.

The police alleged that Mr. Latini who was allowed to keep only 50 kilos of gunpowder on the premises, had far more hidden in a storeroom below his shop for illegal fireworks.

Fireworks found scattered around the wrecker building also led police to investigate whether clandestine factory was operating in the house, Romans tra-ditionally celebrate New Year's Eve with fireworks.

The hullding housed $5 working-class families. Four members of one family, including two infants, were among the dead.

The biggest losers were the Catholics, who went from 35 to 27 seats.

The Liberals could now play e key role in one possible coali-tion, which would keep Mr. Biesheuvel's Confessional Bloc-which has 48 seats in office with e one-seat majority. For this, it would have to persuade the dissident Socialist DS 70 party to join with its six seats.

The biggest winner by percentage was the breakaway Catholic Radical party (PPR), which gained five seats and now has seven. Its advance was attributed to the youth vote and to progressive Catholic disenchanted with the traditional blocs.

The Labor party emerged with the most seats, 43, a gain of four. Today's reaction by Dutch po--Well-placed administration officials reported yesterday that e number of concessions were made by North Vietnam in the most recent phase of peace talks in Paris. But the officials, in various departments of the government, said that et least two or three major differences re-mained to be resolved before a cease-fire agreement was ready for signing.

South Vietnam's continuing concern over the agreement was the topic of discussion at the White House yesterday and today when President Nixon met with Nguyen Phu Duc, a special representative of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

The peace accord in Paris, as pieced together from several interviews, includes these principal new provisions:

· North Vietnam has agreed to specify in the written accord that the 39-mile-wide, 6-miledeep Demilitarized Zone along the 17th Parallel will be re-established as a buffer zone in which neither side may have military installations or conduct military operations. Saigon officials had argued that without such specific language there might appear to be, in effect, North Vietnamese annexation of e part of the northern two prov-Inces of South Vietnam.

Mr. Nixon met this morning with the Joint Chiefs of Staff "to review the entire situation in South Vietnam."

This clashed with a Saigon report that U.S. troop strength in South Vietnam had been frozen. President Nixon said last August that the U.S. troop ceiling

In the previous nine-point draft agreement, the officials say, Washington and Hanoi stipulat-ed "informally" that the withdrawal of Hanoi's troops—es-timated by U.S. officials at 145,000 men-and a compensatory de-activation of some unspecified number of Saigon's 1.1-millionman army would be worked out by the Vietnamese after the cease-fire. Banol, under those circumstances, was willing to with-draw about 35,000 soldiers even earlier, as an act of good faith, the officials said.

But Salgon has insisted that an oral stipulation was insufficient and that the final agreement should include specific provision for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from the South.

New U.S. Process Can Turn Wastes

Such solid wastes as bair, old newspapers, sewage sludge, old clothes and sawdust can be transformed, they said.

The process was reported in the December Issue of Environmental Science and Technology. The scientists who developed it are Liang Fan, David Retzloff and Wayne Vanderpool of Kansas State University. They said tha process has been tested in the laboratory.

Since nuclear wastes might provide the needed radiation, the process also suggests a use for the troublesome byproducts of atomic energy, the scientists said. They used solid wastes and a fluid called methyl methacrylate as their starting materials and then employed radiation to convert the mixture into a plastic composite.

The magazine quoted Mr. Fan as saying that the new sterilized and odorless product looks like beautifully finished wood and can be drilled and isthed like wood.

Officials said they were pleased with the agreement to re-establish the Demilltarized Zone because, they ascert, the four or five main roads running through it can readily be monitored by truce teams. Also, they believe, the effect is to re-establish by law two Victnams as they existed before North Vietnam captured sub-stantial territory in the northern provinces of South Vietnam in the spring offensive.

Called 'an Oversight'

A number of South Vietnamese and American officials criticized Mr. Kissinger for not having insisted on the re-establishment of the Demilitarized Zone in the original draft agreement. Some Washington officials said it was merely "an oversight," but others argued that it needed specific clarification to persuada Saigon to go along with the ultimate

White House Earns Royalties In Business Deal on Medals

By Nick Kotz and Morton Mintz

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (WP). 000—"considerably less than 1—A White House official has percent of my net worth." Two negotiated an unusual husiness other Mint executives contributed venture giving a private manufacturer the right to distribute presidential medals in return or royalties intended to help furnish the executive mansion.

The contract with the Franklin Mint, a rapidly growing manufacturer of coins and medallions, was worked out by Clement Conger, who as White House curator is a federal employee.

Officially, the contract is be-tween the Franklin Mint and the White House Historical Association, a semiautonomous, non-profit group set up under the Kennedy administration to raise funds for White House acquisitions of historic furnishings by selling a guidebook to tourists.
William Walton, firmer board member of the association, said that the venture represents crass commercialism and misuse of both the historical association and White House.

But Mr. Conger said the contracts have produced much needed revenue to purchase antiques, paintings and other historic fur-nishings for the White House. Mr. Conger acknowledged that a mail-order brochure sent out by Franklin Mint to potential purchasers of the presidential med-als appears to have been printed by the White House Historical Association "while actually . . . it is part of the Franklin Mint's

Joseph M. Segel, board chairman of Franklin Mint, said "the vilole situation is ethical and innocent" and was not mnnected in any way with his contribution to the Nixon campaign of $113,-

Historical Association will receive more than $1 million and pos-sibly $2 million in royalties on sales of the presidential medals and two earlier joint ventures: sales of a series of First Ladies medals and of presidential plates. "I think we're doing a public service," Mr. Segel said. "I think that the project is something to be proud of."

Mr. Walton, former chairman of the Commission of the Fine Arts, disagreed. He said that he strongly disapproved of the initial agreement on First Ladies medals at a time when he served on the White House Historical Association board.

"The name of the White House has never been used in this way,"
Mr. Walton said, "It's scandalous.
It's just the kind of crummy commercial deal that we tried to avoid. Clement Conger should be ashamed of himseif."

John Walker, former director of the National Gallery of Art, who still serves as a board member of the White House Historical Association, had reservations about the projects as "too commercial," but stood by "the decision . . . made by the majority of the board." Mr. Walker characterized the sales agreement as obviously a promotional venture on the part of the Franklin Mint with the White House getting some of the

Court Rejects Reporter's Bid For Release

California Newsman To Pursue Appeals

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.-Newspaper reporter William Farr was turned down yesterday by the California Supreme Court, where he had sought release from an indefinite jail sentence for contempt of court Without comment, the court denied petitions filed by Mr. Farr's attorney, Mark E. Hurwitz, for a writ of habeas corpus and for Mr. Farr's release.

The next step will be for Mr. Hurwitz to seek a writ of habeas corpus in the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles. That failing, he could carry the matter to the Court of Appeals and to the U.S. Supreme Court. Mr. Farr, 37, was sent to jail

Monday for the second time in two weeks for his persistence in refusing to identify the source of material released to him in violation of a court order during the Charles Manson murder trial. A new issue raised by Mr. Bur-wits in the habeas corpus pro-ceedings is the behavior of Judga Charles Older in recommitting Mr. Farr to jail.

Race Equality in Punishment Urged in U.S. Military Justice

By George C. Wilson

WASHINGTON, NOV. 30 (WP). -The Defense Department must change its judicial system to provide uniform punishment for minor offenses in order to dampen racial strife in the military, according to a Pentagon task force report released today.

This and other recommends. tions are contained in a threevolume study of how punishment is meted out under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, in appointing the task force in April, asked the group to examine racially related pat-terns and "factors contributing to disperity of punishment" under

Widest Latitude

One theme running through the report is the contention that inequality of punishment is most prevalent when commanders have the widest latitude in imposing

As it is now in the military, a soldier or sailor who is charg-ed with breaking the rules in a relatively minor way can opt for punishment by his commanding officer rather than go through a court-martial.

The NAACP has complained that commanders have sometimes punished blacks more severely than whites under this system of nonjudicial punishment.

The result, according to the NAACP, often is racial strife in the service as the blacks con-clude they are being treated unfairly by their superiors, NAACP lawyers involved with the Kitty Hawk's rioting trials helieve that uneven punishment helped trigger the racial eruption aboard that aircraft carrier.

There must be an overhaul of this nonjudicial system so that the same offenses bring the same punishment, according to the Another recommendation I; to improve in-service education so that those with inferior educations can qualify for hetter johs while in uniform. More education on human relations also is The military's testing system also comes in for renewed criticism in the task force study. The NAACP has complained in the past that the military's tests are unfair to blacks because the tests are based on educational levels, not potential skills, for jobs in the military. The panel also suggested that the military consider redesigning uniform caps so that they can be more easily worn with Afro Nathanial Jones, NAACP gener-l counsel, and Lt. Gen. Claire

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (NYT) .-A midshipman has said that the apparition that is supposed to have been seen at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., was nothing but a Navy stunt, put together with a flash-light, a photographic slide and a fire extinguisher.

UN Study Assails Arms-Race Cost, Asks Aid to Poor

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 30 (AP).-World arms spending has reached $200 billion a year, while only $8 billion goes to help poor nations, a UN stidy says. The report, released yesterday, calls the discrepancy between arms spending and aid to poor nations "shocking."

"Disarmament and development can be linked to each other because the enormous amount of resources wasted in the arms race might be utilized to facilitate development and progress," the

The conclusions were reached by nine experts, headed by Mrs. Alva Myrdal of Sweden, assigned by Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to study links between disarmament and development. Others were from Colombia, Czechoslovakia, France, the Philippines, the Soviet Union, Uganda and Britain.

Disarmament, the experts concluded would produce a "disarmament dividend" that could go for food, clothing, transportation, fuel and other basic needs of The Military Academy, how-ever, denies it, saying it still be-lieves its apparition is authentic, or at least unexplained.

The Military Academy did not mention that its cadets had stolen a Navy goat the other day, and that this might have upset the midshipmen. The Military Academy did not even suggest that the midshipman's announcement might be another in the round of reprisels that midshipmen and cadets take on one another this time of year. Perhaps the Military Acadsmy did not have to.

A Cold Presence

The apparition, which was supposed to resemble, more or less, cavalry soldier from the 1830s. was reported to have visited Room 4714 of the 47th Division barracks at West Point several

Four cadets said they had seen it, and one cadet said he had felt its presence. Its presence, he said, was cold.

Yesterday, however, Midshipman William Gravell said that the thing everyone saw was simply a picture of a midshipman in bits and pieces of old uniforms. The cold, he said, was produced by a fire extinguisher full of carbon dioxide.

"We thought it up last year." Midshipman Gravell said, speaking by telephone from the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md. The brigade activities committee wanted to pull a special stunt on Army before the football game Saturday and we knew that this would work."

He said that he had overexposed the picture so that it looked shadowed, and that a slide had been made from it. The slide and a flashlight were lowered by rope from above Room 4714, he and the fire extingu was lowered through what he described as an air shaft.

He did not, however, say why he and his colleagues had not bothered simply to reach up with the flashlight and fire extinguisher. Room 4714 is on the ground floor.

Midshipman Gravell, who is a senior from Liverton, N. J., said that the carbon dioxide escaping from the fire extinguisher has made "a funny little noise" and that it had awakened the cadets in Room 4714. He said that the shaft ran along the side of the room and that the carbon dioxide had left a patch of cold on the wall.

No Problem at All'

"One time we had to lie low until the commotion from the ghost died down," be said, "The other times there was no problem West Poi- however, denies the way to the top. It would be difficult, it said, to shine a flashlight through it, especially one on a rope. Furthermore, be said, there was steam in Room 4714, which would have wiped out the effect of the carbon dioxide. Col. Diome also said that there might be an air shaft, or something describable as an air shaft, near Room 4714, but that despite a diligent search

U.S. Airline Pilots Warn of Strike

LAS VEGAS, Nov. 30 (AP) .-The Air Line Pilots Association warned yesterday that its mem-bers may respond to any future air hijackings with "a total ces sation of service" and called again for tougher anti-hijack measures by the government. The resolution was passed unanimously by the 380-member board of the 45,000-member group two weeks after ALPA's president,

John J. O'Donnell, warned that another worldwide air service strike appeared the only avenue left to pilots unhappy with government efforts to halt hijacks. The board's resolution stopped short, however, of authorizing a work stoppage like the one last June that shut down air travel in many parts of the world. Court orders prevented the strike from affecting U.S. airlines. Mr. O'Donnell has said that if an airservice shutdown was not effective enough, sympathetic unions might also close down sea com-

The British technical assistance program, under which about 1,000 teachers and agricultural advisers work in Uganda, will be phased out over the next two years, he said. Britain pays nearly half the salaries of the personnel, and this will now be cut off as their contracts expire.

Kank Reduced Officials said it was expected that most, if not all, would return to Britain. A third measure announced by Sir Alec was the decision not to replace, for the time being, the British high commissioner in Kampala. When the previous high commissioner, Richard Slater, left Uganda in October after the being forced out by Commissioner. virtually being forced out by Gen. This official, John Hennings, has now left, and the commission office equivalent to an embassy -will be directed by a lowerranking of ficial.

Sir Alec dld not expand on the reasons for these actions, but other officials made it clear that they were in retaliation for the expulsion of the Asians who, because they held British passports and nationality, chose to flee to Britain.

"We expect." one official said. "that the Ugandan economy will drift back down to the village

The sudden arrival of the Uganda Asians, most of whom are in temporary camps here, has furnished Prime Minister Edward Hentb's government with perhaps gravest political problem it has faced since taking office.

One of Mr. Heath's promises, in his election campaign, was llist immigration gradually would be scaled down. To many of his Conservative supporters, already worried about the settlement of dart-skinned Africans and Aslans in British cities, the decision to admit the Uganda refugees was a betrayaL

The government felt that it was legally as well as morally obliged to admit those luhabitants of Britain's former colonies who found themselves a rejected minority group after independence. The trouble is that in Kenya and Tanzania there are even larger groups of Indians and Pakistanis than there were in Uganda, and there are other minority settlements-the Chinese in Singapore, for example-elsewhere.

Why Still No Peace?

hand." Henry Kissinger said he believed the United States could wrap up the details of an agreement with North Vietnam in one more negotiating session of three or four days' duration. A month later and after a six-day negotiating session, the talks remain uncompleted. They are to be resumed on Monday. What's going on?

* * *

Three broad expianations have been offered by observers. One is that on Oct. 26 Mr. Kissinger misstated the peace prospects to aid his chief's election prospects. This we dismss out of hand as an insult toamong other things-Mr. Nixon's political judgment. A second theory holds that Mr. Nixon, appreciating his adviser's reputation for credibility, tricked him into offering Hanoi certain terme which the President intended all along to weasei on. Not only ie there no evidence that this is true, but it misreads, in our judgment, the nature of the working relationship of the two men. No doubt there is a aubtle interplay between the Nixon intentions and the Kissinger movements and statements. But, no matter what Hanoi may fear or Saigon hope, we tilink it is an interplay calculated and controlled by the two principals throughout.

A third possible explanation stems from the likelihood that the Oct. 26 announcement did not so much "end the war" as precipitate an 11th-hour struggle for ceasefire position by the contending Vietnamese. We find this view far and away the most persuasive By Oct. 26 Washington and Hanol had agreed in principle to end their fighting against each other. But Washington had not secured Saigon's agreement to the particu-

On Oct. 26, announcing that "peace is at iars, and Hanoi had perhaps not secured the National Liberation Front's. In any event, each Vietnamese party realized it was at that final stage where it could make only one iast effort to use the bargaining weight of the American presence for its own advantage. This is why, by the way, President Thien eent his personal emissary to confer with Mr. Nixon this week.

For Saigon, this final stage has meant using the American presence (while it rcmains) to pry Hanoi's troops out of South Vietnam and to zip closed the DMZ and the old sanctuaries and supply routes in Laos and Cambodia. For Hanol this has meant offering the United States its prisoners and some kind of political figleaf in Sooth Vletnam-in return for the chance to keep in the South as much military force as possible in order to retain captured territory, to protect Viet Cong cadres not in Mr. Thisu's julis and to help free those in the jails. For Hanoi the eignificance of this effort lies in the huge forces (army, air force, police) Saigon has at its disposal-forces even now being readied for post-cease-fire struggle by quick massive injections of extra American arms and "civilian" advisers.

The principal point is that everyone assumes-we believe correctly-that a settlement will mean two quite different things for the United States, and for Vietnam, For the United States it will mean ending its own combat role and retrieving its prisoners. but for Vietnam it will likely mean continuing the war by other-political guerrillameans. It is for advantage in that next stage that, at Paris and on the battlefield, the Vietnamese are now vying.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Year of Europe

Henry A. Kissinger recently dropped the remark that "1973 will be the year of Europe"—a prophecy that many European leaders have been quoting with a mixture of hope and trepidation.

The Europeans' hope is that, as the United States extricates itself from Vietnam, President Nixon will devote more attention to Europe—and to helping resolve some crucial issues that no longer can be neglected.

These include:

Future American military force levels in Europe, and West Europe's plana for its own defense:

Reform of the international monetary system along the lines laid down last September by Secretary of the Treasury Shultz-and the difficulty of reconciling those reforms with proposed European monetary integration;

European concern about the huge holdings of inconvertible American dollars:

Opposition in some European quarters to receiving so much direct American invest-

American chargee of trade discrimination and market disruption by the expanding European community-and European countercharges of discrimination by the United States

All such issues have festered from neglect at the highest level. But if the Europeans have not welcomed American neglect, they have reason to suspect that they will like even less the kind of attention they are going to get.

The opening last week of a new round of etrategic arms ilmitation talks in Geneva and the launching of preparatory talks in Helsinki for a European security conference are reminders that a reordering of European-American military arrangements has hecome crucial. That delicate and vital task -which may invoive significant American force reductions in Europe-would be hampered and distorted by a bitter dispute over monetary, trade and investment differences between Europe and the United States.

Unfortunately, the Europeans may have reason to fear that 1973 may see a resurgence of the sort of aggressive American foreign policy that was conducted by John B. Connally as Secretary of the Treasury. The President and his top aides have made clear their view that, in the post-cold war era, a nation's economic strength is the dominant element of its international power.

The Europeans will be only realistic if they recognize that, whether American rhetoric is aggressive or conciliatory-and in past months it has oscillated between those poles-U.S. foreign economic policy will be sharply focused on strengthening the dollar and the American international economic position. The administration will doubtless employ whatever means-liberal, protectionist or mercantilist-that it considers necessary to achieve those objectives.

There are plenty of sins against avowed liberal trade principles on both sides of the Atlantic. The list of U.S. import quotas has lengthened continuously in recent years: and the highly protectionist American selling price system for chemicals has never been dismantled, as American negotiators sald would be done during the Kennedy Round. * * *

On their side, the Europeans have been highly insensitive to American concerns about their trade practices and artificial barriers that this country once tolerated when its international economic position was auper-strong, but that it is unwilling to tolerate longer. The Europeans' Common Agricultural Policy hurts American exports in a major area where the United States still has a strong comparative advantage. The Common Market has ignored the mostfavored-nation principle of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as it widons its free trade area to include not only three new members but also to include seven other European nations; and it grants preferential trading arrangements to many other Mediterranean and African countries.

Unless a greater effort is made on both sides of the Atlantic to find waye of resolving ontstanding economic and military issnes, 1973 could prove to be not merely the "year of Europe" but the year European-

American relations really deteriorated. If that were permitted to happen, the consequences for economic development and, ultimately, for the political solidarity and military security of the Atlantic community would be exceedingly grave. The history of the twentieth century is largely a story of the vital interdependence of the nations on either side of the North Atlantic.

PARIS.—It is five and a half years since Egypt broke off diplomatio relations with the United States during the disastrous six-day war with Israel and the time is long overdue for 2 restoration of normal ambassadorial exchanges.

Moreover, an excellent candidate exists as a possible first American envoy since the break. He is John Sherman Cooper, who has given up his Senate seat from Kentucky where his political popularity was unprecedented, and who was one of the very best of a remarkable series of U.S. Ambassadors to India.

Ties Severed

Cairo severed ties with Washington in 1967 largely because of false information purporting to show that American forces aided Israeli air attacks. But, because of evident U.S. support for Israel, there would have been a break anyway. However, Egyptian relationships with other lands, including Britain, were subsequently

The United States has, in fact, been efficiently and effectively represented by a small diplomatic mission attached to the Spanish Embassy in Cairo which handles American interests during the hiatus. This mission, beaded by a coreer diplomat, has been useful in facilitating exchanges of information and high-level contacts.

Nevertheiess, an artificial formula doesn't have the same influence or prestige value as a regular plenipotentiary possesses and it would be useful for both Cairo and Washington to arrange normalization. Since Cooper is leaving the Schate, be is an obas eovoy.

Revive Hopes

It will be easier to revive hones for a Middle East peace formula if the United States is represented in Cairo by a man with qualities equal to those of the singular Walworth Barbour, American envoy to Israel. Furthermore, establishment of a fully accredited embassy in Cairo, number one capital of the Arab world, would have important regional signifi-

President Anwar Sadat has hinted at various times in various ways that he would like to restore relations but there has never been a moment when Cairo and Washington moved far enough in the same direction at the same time. Mr. Sadat clearly hoped when he expelled the Societ milltary missions and technicians that he would be able to gain tangible support from America and West-ern Europe; but he falled. Moscow has sent some weapons and experts back. The issue, nevertheless, isn't how to get a war restarted, but how to get peace talks back on the rails. Mr. Sadat, by incli-nation, favors the conservative wing of the Nasserist movement and has at various times presented himself as a champion of peace. Likewise, he has opened the door to foreign capital.

However, he has had to tack leftward every time he moved rightward because of the evidently uneasy position of his regime which has had to muffle several plots. He has also had to maneuver delicately in the Arab world where he is linked in a tenuous federation with pro-Soviet revolutionary Syria and anti-Soviet revolutionary Libya.

Tightrope Walk

It is difficult to foresee how long the Egyptian president can continue this complicated tightrope walk while simultaneously honoring a cease-fire and proclaiming a state of war along the Israeli front, Bome observers maintain Sadat's position is so inherently uncertain that it would be foolish for the United States to lend him prestige by sending

Feigned Shock

We feigned stunned shock and emazement that a civilized nation should have so speedily and ignominiously bowed to the Arab terrorists. We waxed indignant that they should have dared to release the three Arab Munich murderers. Our premier, in visible agitation, declared that "We live with a feeling of oppression" at the thought that civilized nations have not gone to battle to protect Israel from Arab terror. By the waters of the Knesset there we sat, and also wept, as we remembered the faithlessness of our German allies.

botched the job. What we have is scarcely distinguishable from the labored London musical of the same source, minus, fortunately, its alleviating pop score. It is for the most part cheap, vulgar and uninspired, grubby rather than earthy, nesty rather than saucy. It has been staged not with the healthy robust hu-nior, known as Rabelalsian, but with the nose-holding disgust of Swift observing humans doing what comes only too naturally. It was shot in England and ap-parently in English, a language of which the director betrays a limited knowledge. The dialogue, far from Chaucerian, is that of the Broadway gutter and inserted colloquialisms jar. "OK, let's go!" cries a 14th-century English farm lad to a companion.

One Sequence Pictorially and dramatically there is but one impressive pas-sage. This is the sequence in which a sodomite is burned aliva in a town square before the satisfied clergy and the gaping mob. The devil, disguised as a griddle-cake vendor, tracks down the corrupt informer as the black fumes rise from the smoking pyre and whisks him off to the nether re-

The framework of the film is that of the Chaucer chronicles with the Canterbury-bound pilgrims paying their night's lodg-ing by spinning bold yarns. As a raconteur of snappy stories, Pasolini is far too leisurely and the action continually drags. Dino Risi in "Vedo Nudo" turned the trick more neatly. The conti-ruity of the script is cloudy with one tale often being telescoped confusingly into another. Occasionally there is a break with Pasolini appearing as Chaucer in his study as he cribs from Boccaccio or as he saunters forth to rub elbows with the course riffraff in the taverns and the

Music in Italy

A New Production of Verdi: Rarely Heard 'I Masnadieri'

By William Weaver

ROME (THT).—The new season at the Teatro dell'Opera was inaugurated a few days ago with a new production of Verdi's "I Masmedieri," one of the composer's least-performed early works. Eight years ago it was staged in Florence and revived the following year), and it has been given once over the Italian radio. Otherwise, it has been ignored here. So the Roman staging was still something of a novelty, and obviously a welcome one (performances have been selling out regularly).

Originally written for London in 1847, with Jenny Lind in the leading femals role, "I Masnadieri" is not an easy opera, and it cannot be said that the Roman theater has overcome all the problems the work poses. The chief one is casting: In addition to a star soprano with a voice both strong and agile, a Verdian tenor and baritone are required, and there is a relatively short, but vital role for the bass.

Musicians

The Rome Opera assembled a group of excellent musicians, but none of them was really ideal. In the part of the hapless Amalia, Ilva Ligabue sang with her usual skill and her engaging warmth. Though the music is not really hers, she entered completely into the drama. The stage seemed to come to life when she was on it.

Gianni Raimondi, as the bandit-hero (the libretto is based on Schiller's "The Robbers"), did his best, which is still quite good. Never a true Verdian tenor, except for roles like Alfredo io "La Traviata," Raimondi now, after about 25 years of a distinguished career, is understandably not in a position to take risks. The voice, carefully husbanded, had moments of sweetness, but did not make its mark in the ensembles, except for the superb final t-lo, which crowns this opera rich in stirring and affecting scenes

As the old father, Boris Christoff exploited his dominating presence and his still-voluminous voice to great effect, though legato singing is now beyond him. The young baritone Renato Bruson was the wicked brother. In his great monologue in the last act, he was convincing. Elsewhere, he seemed ill at ease, not at home in the part. Smaller roles were well sung by Gian Paolo Corradi and Giovanni Fojani.

Two Senses

Gianandrea Gavazzeni, who also conducted the Florence revival of the opera, clearly loves the score and feels it deeply. At times he had to sacrifice Verdisn vigor out of consideration for the capacities of his singers, but the opera as a whole moved—in both senses— and impressed. Mario Missiroli's staging was conventional, acceptable. Elena Mannini designed elegant (sometimes obtrusively 50) costumes, and some of Gian Corlo Blenardi's sets-notably in the first two acts-were pleasant to look at though the tricky arrangement of a grim tower in a forest defeated him, and so a crucial last act scene took place in ugliness.

However imperfect the evening, it was still deeply enjoyable, a positive contribution to the public's acquaintance with early Verdi.

says: "Essentially a tasteful treatment of a tastelese subject (but) the authors have neglected to treat it with origi-nality or verve." A single telsvision reviewer, Leonard Harris. WCBS-TV, reports: ". An inept, dreadful musical." Wilde is played by Richard Kneeland. Nancy Cushman plays his mother,

Kimberly Vaughn, his wife. "F.O.B.," a "pure fiction" play by Jeff Weiss, directed by Gaby Rodgers, is the playwright "offering his confessional, revealing his anxieties, frustrations and ani-mosities," Mel Gussow comments. There are two people on stage, Mr. Weiss, who says he is Jeff Weiss's brother, and William Finley, playing an encyclopedia salesman, "which in turn is cover for his true identity as the illegitimate son of the drama critic tude" in this production. ing "in both cases, is better than the material," Gussow judges, but in the second act "all pretense that it is a play is thrown away." "The Dragon Lady's Revenge."
at the Washington Square Methodist Church, is described by Mel Gussow as "a scathing mudcal cartoon" about the drug trade in Southeast Asia. "Political theater often sacrifices art for the sake of politics, but this is not the case with the San Francisco Mime Troupe . . . an excellent company of theatrical artists, polemicists and satirists." The new musical treats the drug trade "as Hollywood Oriental movies treated the white-slave trade, except that The Dragon Lady is intentionally comic." Andrea Snow plays the Dragon Lady. manager of the nefarious White Monkey Bar.

"Yoshke Musikant," an "amalgam of folklore, unrequited love, native humor and music," adapted from the late Ossip Dimow's play won praise from A.H. Weiler, The pot is "simple and convoluted" in the tradition of the Yiddish theater, Weiler says, staged on a realistic set that "captures the homey quality of a middle-class family kitchen." The cast, "light-hearted but professional about the serio-comic tale they're spinuing," includes David Rogov as a stuttering cemetery plot sales-man, Menashe Oppenheim, as a chimney sweep, and Zipporah Apaizman, as "an old happy busy-body." It also announced that as of Feb. 1-so as to avoid complicating year-end window dressing and tax payments-it will reduce by 10 percent the amount of money the banks may borrow from the Bundesbank

Commercial bankers here and in Frankfurt are agreed that it is clear that the cost of borrowing money will become increasingly expensive (theoretically discouraging requests for loans, thus not increasing the money in circulation and perhaps delaying purchases of goods and services). But they are not convinced that this will have a major impact on investment decision or stockbuilding, although it probably will discourage individuals from going into new debt.

Frankfurt bankers say the government is moving slowly in fighting inflation-prices are rising at a 8.4 percent annual ratebecause it does not want to undo the recovery now under way in business, which suffered from the long float and subsequent revaluation last year of the deutsche

In addition, the bankers are awaiting a cabinet reshuffle before attempting any serious new measures-such as a cut in the size of the federal deficit or tax changes. The deficit this year is expected to total about 48 billion DM compared to 1 billion in Advance word about the upcoming French measures is that they will include a drop in certain value-added-tax rates, resulting in lower prices. "They are easily maneuverable and it makes seuse," says one banker, "but it does nothing to attack why prices are rising,"

Food prices have been the fastest rising element of the price index here, he notes, adding that any logical attack should begin

Although the Pompidon government has already ruled out any possibility of a generalized wageprice freeze, it announced today steps to force lower the prices for butter and potatoes. It said it would sell butter from its surplus stocks at 2.50 francs (about 50 cents) a kilogram (2.2 pounds) below the current price. The price of potatoes will administratively he set about 5 centimes (1 cent) lower per kilo.

Uneven Benefits

It is estimated," the company said, "that the third quarter has benefited by about £7 million due mainly to the uneven incidence in the period of such currency changes. The level of benefit to date in the fourth quarter is lower.

BP's statement gave no hint of its prospects for the fourth quarter or for 1973, but industry sources have indicated that margins on oil trading have recently been improving.

BP's pre-tax income actually showed an increase in the third quarter, rising to £176.8 million from £173.4 million a year earlier. But its overseas texation jumped to £161.7 million from £136.8 million a year earlier.

Third-quarter volume was good. with crude oil sales rising to 31.6 million metric tons from 27.4 million tons n year earlier and sales of products, including chemicals, rising to 26.7 million tons from 22.3 million tons a year

Natural gas sales rose to 32.77 billion cubic feet from 30.88 billlon cubic feet a year earlier.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Japanese Curb More Exports

Japanese electric bome appliance manufacturers will apply self-imposed export curbs on 15 main Items, including refrigerators, to all world markets. The Electronics Industries Ascociation says it has informed the government of its decision to form a one-year export cartel to regulate exports for the period from last September to 28.5 percent above shipments in the corresponding period a year earlier. The control plan follows the curb on 24 electronic items, such as stereophonic equipment, announced last Tuesday to cooperate in the government's program to avert another yen revaluation by reducing heavy trade surpluses.

Siemens, Bosch to Intensify Link

Siemens and Robert Bosch will intensify their cooperation in making electrical bousehold equipment and radio and television sets. The companie will transfer all assets and liabilities of Robert Rosch Hausgeraete and of Siemens-Electrogeracte to Bosch-Slemens Hausgeracte. Bosch Hausgeraste manufactures primarily refrigera-tors and dishwashers while Slemens-Electrogenacte produces washing machines, electric hitchen ranges and small household goods. Products of the two units will continue to be sold under separate trade names.

Japan Said to Beat Europe in R&D

Japan's expenditure on scientific and technological research increased beyond the level of individual Western European nations in 1970. And the proportion spent by private enterprices was the highest among major Western nations, including the United States, according to Kohei Suzue, president of Research Development Corp. of Japan. His claim was made in a paper deliver ed at the United Nations Industrial Development Organization conference on research activities in developing countries. He said Japan's expenditure on research activity passed 1,000 billion sen ($3.2 billion) for the first time in 1970, with n 28.1 percent increase over the previous year, The sum spent, 1,195.3 billion yen, was about 2 billion yen more than that spent by France or West Germany and 3 billion yen more than Britain. GE Expects 'Strong' Fourth Quarter

General Electric expects a customary "strong" fourth quarter, with year sales to top $10 billion. president Reginald Jones reports. In 1971 GE had sales of $8.5 billion and earned 85 cents a share on sales of $2.725 billion in the fourth quarter. Mr. Jones says that order backlog now stands at an "all time high" of more than $10 billion, GE's power-generation business is expected to grow at an average annual rate of 12-15 percent over the next 10 years and its backlog is now over $6 billton, Mr. Jones adds.

British Construction Orders Fall The provisional index for average construction rders in Britain fell in the third quarter to 112 from 129 in the second quarter, but was unchanged from a year earlier, the government says. The ladex, seasonally adjusted, is based on the 1963 average quarterly level equaling 100. Rousing construction in the third quarter, also seasonally adjusted, was 118, down from 125 in the second quarter but up from 100 a year earlier. Public sector work was 116, down from 146 and 144

BOCA RATON, Fiz., Nov. 20 (Reuters).—William J. Casey, outgoing chairman of the Secu-rities and Exchange Commission, suggested today that brokerage firms increase the handling charges on large block trades.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Securities Industry Association (SIA), he noted that while It does not cost a hundred times as much to handle a 100,000-share order as it casts to handle a 1,000-share order, such pricing analysis is clearly superficial. He noted that it takes a far greater skill, responsibility and risk to handle large orders and this should be reflected in the pricing. He added that if the industry fails to do this, the result would

Quebec Sets Big Borrowing

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP-DJ) .-Quebec expects to be a big borrower on the world's capital markets in the coming years to E.A. Lemieux, director general for finance of Hydro-Quebec's James Bay project, said current indications are that borrowings or $400 million to $500 million in each of the next four or five years will be required to finance the province's power developments.

Mr. Lemieux, who was speaking at a conference here sponsored by Institutional Investor, a U.S. magszine, said "an important part" of the anticipated borrowings will be done outside Canada, Hydro-Quebec, whose horrowings are guaranteed by the Province of Quebec, already has outstanding, in foreign currencies, a debt of more than $1.7 billion, on which it will be making payments for principal and interest of more than $1.9 billion between 1973 and 1984 inclusive, he said.

GOLDA MEIER AND PRIME MINISTER SADAT JOIN IN EXPRESSING SYMPATHY FOR THE AMERICAN

BRIDGE.

By Alan Truscott

South, bidding wildly, arrived at four spades by the diagramed route. He should have contented himself with a three diamond bid on the second round, which is always a strong action. North would have rebid hearts, and bid them for the third and final time when South rebid spades.

As it was, South could not be sure what to do over four hearts, and chose to rebid four spades. North abandoned hope of becoming the declarer, feeling that a singleton trump was better than west led a club, the unbid suit, and the eight, jack and ace were played. At this point, South's safest road to ten tricks would have been to ruff a diamond, ruff a club and lead trumps. But South was playing for overtricks. At the second trick he led the the key play. It was very probable that South had exactly one heart, for with more than one he would not have rejected a heart contract, and with none at all his first move would have been to ruff a diamond and lead hearts. So East returned a heart, and South's hopes of 12 tricks faded. With his communications cut, there was no way to make even ten.

South continued to play dummy's heart winners. East ruffed the third round and was overruffed. The dummy was dead, and the declarer had three unavoidable diamond losers.

Notice that the declarer would have had no trouble making 12 tricks if East had returned anything but a heart at the third trick. Leading dummy's solid suit before the trumps have been drawn can often be a most effective defensive maneuver.

An expert field would probably arrive in four hearts on the diagramed deal. This contract can be held to 11 tricks if East hits on a club lead, but makes 12 with any other lead.

ON DIRECTING

By Harold Clurman. Illustrated. The Macmillan Co. 301 $7.95.

Reviewed by Alex Szogyi

HAROLD CLURMAN is unique. Unique and singular. For there is only one man like him in our theater today. In this age of criticism in which the creative and critical faculties are more frequently wedded than at any other literary moment, the theeter has rarely produced those who function famously in both realms. Walter Kerr, Kenneth Tynan, Robert Brustein, yes, each in his own way, has been both. But in our time no director who has had a major career directing major plays has also functioned as a major criticat the same time. Harold Clurman has had the true staying. power: as founder of the Group Theater, director of plays of moment (spanning virtually 40 creative years) such as "Awake and Sing," "Golden Boy," "The Member of the Wedding." "Bus Stop." "The Autumn Gerden," and "Uncle Vanya," and as drama critic for The Nation, he has been for many years one of the illustrious in the American theater Establishment.

In recent years, we have been treated to a multitude of theater memoirs and remembrances of theatrical glories past. Whenever these books appear, one measures them instinctively against "The Fervent Years," Harold Churman's account of The Group Theater, published in 1943. As a director friend of mine put it, it was not only a fine book about American theater, it also explained the Depression: it was a piece of our fives, an essence distilled of what it meant to be in the United States in the thirties.

Now jaunty Harold Chaman has produced another important. book, one certain to be read as universally and which will find its place onto the shelves of every theater library in the wide world, not to speak of the amusement and edification it will bring to amateurs and cognoscenti of theater. .. His book on directing is a straightforward, tasteful and articulate account of what it is to bring a play to pelpitating life upon a stage. It is a book utterly devoid of faddishness, one which, though it is filled with fillips of self-satisfied wit and dollops of salubrious arrogance, is a perfectly therapeutic experience. We are taken logically from the choice of the play, right through every aspect of its production, from the work with the playwright to the casting the rehearsals, previews, tryouts, performances and beyond. Churman is at his best when making pre-cise distinctions: He insists that Shaw's "Heartbreak House" is emphatically not a Chekhovian play, but rather a "Pantasia in the Russian manner on English Themes" he elucidates why Stanislavski's belebrated System, or Method, despite its value for the actor, has never been thor-oughly practiced either here or in Russia. The System is a tech-Russia. nique, it is not an end in itself. Nor is it a theory. It exists and has value only in practice, in the work of the actor, the director, the company. . . The Method teaches the actor how thance of success."

He is, finally, an eothus teller of tales, full of witty-schmerz and cogent seium detail: "The story has it one day Racine entered his where guests were awaiting when asked what prompted apparent elation, he repide have just finished my new the dialogue."

Ferhaps the most useful of the book is devoted to a man's own director's note his production, aimed at a sing out and realizing the matters is the sort of reality play aims at its own reality."

and players did not. Deadlines Near Talks have been going on between the two sides since carly September with two deadlines approaching: The "basic agreement" on minimum pay, working conditions and the reserve system expires Dec. 31. The pension agreement expires March 31. The key issues are money and the year-to-year freedom of players, who, under the reserve clause in baseball, belong to one club until they retire or are traded.

Kuhn, a Wall Street lawyer who has been commissioner four years, gave his report in an unusual news conference in a Walkiki Beach hotel on tha third day of the owners' annual business meeting. The players' shop stewards, meanwhile, have been holding their annual meeting in the Bahamas, 6,000 miles away.

"The joint talks will be recon vened Wednesday in New York," the commissioner said. "This is a status report on the clubs' most recent proposal It has been indicated by the players that the proposal is not adequate to bring about a settlement. In effect, they have said no. But I think the last strike was very harmful and a repetition would be devastating to the owners and players alike." More Money

The bwners' plan would relax the reserve clause for the first time in a century, raise pensions and minimum pay and guarantee at least $20,000 s man for World Series winners. These were the highlights of the plan:

· A player with five years in the big leagues would become s free agent-free to make his own deal-if not offered $30,000 for his sixth year. After eight years, he would be free if not offered $40,-000. After 10 seasons, if the last five were with one team, he could not be traded without his con-

 The number of players un~ der the control of each of the 24 teams would be cut from 40 to 38, and those on the varsity roster from 25 to 23. In addition, three players on each club must be made available for selection by other clubs in its league. The last-place team would go first and would pay $35,000 for any on pensions, the clubs' annual contribution of nearly $6 million will be continued three more years and then be raised by creased cost of health care, Fixed retirement benefits would be raised by 6 percent, Also, 300 explayers from the 1940s and 1950s would get 10 percent increases. All the new retirement benefits would be financed from gains within the pension fund. Minimum pay would be lifted from the $13,500 at present to 1974 and $15,000 in 1975. The owners would guarantee a minimum purse of $20,000 s man for the team that wins the World Series. The present minimum is $15,000, though the Oakland A's this year netted more than $20,000 spiece.

Maryland Opens With Record Show

(UPI). - No. 3-ranked Maryland opened its season last night by setting a school scoring record in a 127-82 rout of an inexperienced and nuch smaller Brown team. Maryland's show, led by Tom McMillens's 23 points, bettered its previous mark of 117 set last year, and gave it the highest margin of victory, 45, in school history. Brown tied the score at 12-all early in the game, but Maryland's double-post offense and height was too much and the Terps pulled away to a 54-32 halftime lead. Halfway through the second period. Maryland held a 35-point lead and began substituting freely. Six Terps hit in double figures, with Jim O'Brien scoring 20 points and freshman

Righ scorer for the game was Brown's Vaughn Clarke with 28. Elsewhere, Dwight Lamar wasted no time picking up where he left off in March. Lamar, who led the nation's major colleges in scoring last season, poured in 30

Knicks End 76ers' Streak At 1 With 48-Point Victory

PHILADELPHIA NOV. 30 (UPI).-Bill Bradley set the pace with 26 points as the New York Knicks ran up their largest score of the season, defeating the Philadelphia 76ers, 139-91, night in a National Basketball As-ociation game,

The loss snapped Philadelphia's one-game winning streak and was the 76ers 22d loss against only two victories. The Knicks are now 20-4, and trail firstplace Boston in the East by 24 percentage points, though they have a half-game lead over the Ceitics, who are 18-3. The Knicks led twice by 43 points while rolling to their third straight victory and their seventh in their last eight games.

Rockets 102, Bullets 94

Jack Marin scored on a driving layup with 3 minutes 20 seconds left to break open a tight game and spark Houston to a 102-94 victory over Baltimore. Marin's score gave the Rockets a 91-90 lead over his former teammates and Houston led the rest of the way. Bucks 105, Balls 97 Bobby Dandridge combined for Atlanta.

Smith Remains Perfect With Rout Over Kodes

1956,

BARCELONA, Nov. 30 (UPI) .-Sten Smith played near perfect tennis tonight to rout Jan Kodes, 6-1, 6-0, and moved into the semifinals of the $50,000 Masters tournament along with two other Americana, Jimmy Connors and Tom Gorman,

When the match was over, the 6-foot-3-inch Wimbledon champion said: "I don't think I have played a better match. There may have been some occasion, but for the moment I can't think of one.

"It's funny, yoo play a near perfect match and still you are not satisfied. I guess I missed about five or six shots all evening. That made me mad. I wanted it to be perfect."
Smith is now 3-1 for the year against Kodes, the man he beat for the 1971 U.S. Open title. With a 3-0 record in Masters, Smith moves into the semifinals where he'll be opposed by the second man in Group A. Kodes's only winning game was in the third game of the first set In the second, Smith lost only one point in three service games. Smith, who once took 10 straight points, finished the match by breaking Kodes to love. the dispirited Czechoslovak ending the match with a double fault.

Soccer Star Best Has New Trouble: With Law, Team

MANCHESTER, England, Nov. 30 (UPI).—Manchester United's wayward soccer star George Best today faced disciplinary action by his club for the fifth time in 23 months-plus trouble of a different kind.

Manchester police said a summons had been serred on Best to appear in court Dec. 11 to answer a charge of alleged assault on a 20-year-old girl. Best's lawyers, after an hour-long meeting with the player today, were said to be seeking an adjournment.
The girl, Stefanja Sloniecki, alleges Best punched her in the face at a Manchester night club late last night.

The Irish international winger. 26, was also suspended by his club manager, Frank O'Farrell, for skipping training sessions this week after being warned for the same offense last week.

Davis Cup tennis for Australia next year for the first time since Rosewall, who is eligible for the competition now that his contract with the World Championship Tennis group has run out, said he wanted to help Australia regain the trophy it lost to the United States in 1968.

Australia, unable to call on players such as Rod Laver, John Newcombe and Rosewall because of the Davis Cup ban on contract professionals, has failed to reach the final for the past four

In Melbourne, the president of the Australian Lawn Tennis Association, Wayne Reid, announced that the Esso Australia Oil Company had agreed to sponsor to Davis Cup squad with $25,000.

WimbledonPaid WCT For Players

LONDON, Nov. 30 (Reuters).—The English Lawn Tennis Association paid £10,000 ($24,000) to the World Championship Tennis group to enable WCT professionals to play at Wimbledon last year. according to figures released

The payment, the first of its type ever made by the English LTA was listed in the association's accounts issued today. The WCTs 1971 entries included Australian John New combe, the eventual men's singles champion.

No WTC player took part in this year's Wimbledon championships because of the subsequent rift between the International Lawn Tennis Federation and the WCT troupe run by millionaire Lamar Hunt.

Tread and Wine

By Russell Baker

nally arrived in the United States. Last week on the cover of Time. Television executives predict that it will soon be almost as vital to American culture as snow

For people who Baker ordinary still haven't mastered snow tires this is bad news, for the only thing in the world more confusing than anow tires is wine. By hard minds get a loose grip on snow tires-the sort of grip the average high-school boy gets on algebra—or they may learn enough about wine to get out of an expense-account restaurant without being humiliated. They cannot do both. . . .

Snow tires give you a hangover even more agonizing than gin's, producing a proionged vagueness which the sufferer is powerless to distinguish between a two-ply, two belt nylon tubeless superstudded ice grabber with chainsaw treads and a steel-belted four-ply rayon girdle with garters attached, guaranteed for twice as many miles as the highpriced spread.

Wine also presents certain complexities. The first is the question of which wine to serve with which food. Wine professors sometimes try to dismiss this issue as unimportant. It does not really matter, they say, how you match wine to food provided you, the consumer, like the combination.

This may work for Alexis Lichine, but anyone less authoritative who adopts it as a principle of wine drinking will be inviting the contempt of all other wine drinkers. Recent studies of the French Revolution, to illustrate bow severe this contempt may be, suggest that the French never thought for a moment of overthrowing Louis XVI until word spread through Paris that he invariably drank muscatel with Robespierre, by contrast, was worshipped by Parisians, even pronounce.

WASHINGTON.—Wine has fi- though he drank red Chianti with everything—clams on the half shell, grilled catfish, everything. Chianti is an Italian wine, and Parisians knew their wine code. When drinking in the Italian mode, it is uncivilized to make a fuss about wine color.

Perfectionists, however, will not accept Robespierre's facile solution. They will go to the great masters of wine for education and be teld that, in general, a red wine is drunk with a red meat while a white wine is drunk with a white meat.

This sounds childlishly easy until one starts trying to apply it. Red wine with red meat, white wine with white meat-fine. But what about brown meat? It is disheartening to discover how much brown meat there is, Chill. Hot does and beans. Well done roast beef. Or is that gray meat?

There's a good bit of gray meat too, Certain veal cutlets. Well fried pork chops. The offier segments of the bluefish

Is it correct to drink a brown wine—a Bristol cream sherry, say—with brown meats? A gray wine with gray meats? Nothing could be more naive. Important men have been thrown out of excellent French restaurants in New York for ordering sherry with their hot dogs.

Probably the wisest thing to do if you have ordered hot dogs is to tell the wine steward to bring you some mustard.

The next problem, of course, is learning to tell the good vintage years from the mediocre vintage years, and the great vintage years from the terrible vintage years. This is not easy but should present no insurmountable difficulty to anyone who enjoys solving quadratic equations in his head while riding crowded

Pronunciation. How, you will ask, can I possibly overcome the pronunciation problem? Do I dare go in public and try to say "Pouilly-Fuissé," "Puligny Montrachet" or "Chateau Yquem"? The sensible answer is "no." No man in his right mind, after all, would try to buy a snow tire he couldn't

Haven for Biblical Animals

By Terence Smith

ELATH, Israel (NYT).—Two thousand years ago vast herds of long-horned antelopes and gazelle and the nimble ibex roamed the rocky wastes of the Negev. In all some 120 species are mentioned in the Old Testament, but many have disappeared.

In a conservation experiment, the surviving species of the biblical menageries are being reassembled in an ambitious wildlife preserve that was started about three years ago 25 miles north of this port

The objective is to establish breeding herds of as many species as possible of the animals described in the Bible, many of which are threatened with extinction.

"The biblical references to the ibex, oryx and addax mean nothing to kids today unless they can see what they look like," said Uri Tson, deputy director of the Nature Reserves Authority, who conceived the project. "And unless we act fast, our children will never have that chance

Setting

The animals are being collected on an 8,000-acre preserve called Hai Bar, which is Hebrew for wildlife, situated less than mile from the Jordanian border in a flat, rocky plain known as the Arava. It is a dramatic setting, bordered on the east by the mountains of Jordan and on the west by the hills of the Neger.

Hai Bar is one of 160 preserves, ranging in size from an acre to several thousand, that have been set aside throughout Israel by parliament and designated as wildlife refuges. Their existence is an illustration of late-blooming interest in environmental

Working with a budget of about $300,000 raised exclusively by private donation, the Nature Reserves Authority has collected 120 rare animals from seven endangered

They include 22 Nubian ibex, the largest herd in captivity; several Persian onagers, a rare breed of wild ass on which, according to tradition, Jesus rode into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday, and the addax antelope, an exotic species with enormous spiral horns that was last seen in the region in the Several addaxes were acquired recently from a game farm in New York State and two scimitar-horned oryx were obtained as R gift from the National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C.

In addition there are heros of rare wild animals such as the dorcas gazelle roaming freely at Hai Bar. One blue-necked Ethioplan ostrich survives from a group of 24 that could not adjust to the harsh conditions.

Airlift

The most recent and costliest acquisition is a group of 12 Somali wild asses, which were atriffed from Ethiopia two months ago at a cost of $90,000. Now nearly extinct, they are wild, proud animals that are said to be the progenitor of the domestic don-

More than any of the other animals, the Somali asses have fought against captivity.

"They were captured deep in the remotest parts of the Ethiopian desert and probably had never seen a man before," explained Michael van Grevenbroek, a Dotch agronomist, who is manager of Hai Bar.
"When they first arrived, they threw themselves against the fences in wild fear every time a man approached them. They've calmed down now, but we have R lot of broken fences to repair."

To contain them Mr. van Grevenbroek is enclosing a large area with a fence made of railroad ties set vertically a few inches apart so that people can see the animals, it is hoped without frightening them.

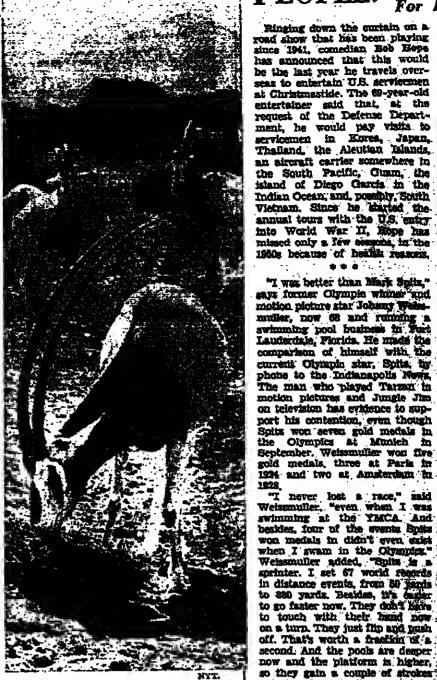

Hai Bar is not yet open to the public, but large observation towers are under construction from which visitors will be able to watch the grazing herds. Eventually the park will be opened to limited automobile touring.

The driving force behind wildlife conservation in Israel is Avraham Yoffe, a retir-ed general and hero of the six-day war who is the director of the Nature Reserves

Many of the threatened biblical species survive only in the Arab countries, which usually refuse to sell them to Israel. As R result, General Yoffe has been forced to buy from international dealers and zoos, often paying premium prices.

One animal that is high on his current shopping list is the Arabian oryx, a straight-horned antelope that is believed to be the real-life inspiration for the mythical unicorn. Less than 100 survive as a result of unrestricted hunting in the Arab countries. The price is high; Mr. Tson estimates that a pair in good condition would cost $30,000.

Ultimately when the breeding herds grow large enough, Hal Bar will begin to earn money from the sale of animals. Mr. van Grevenbroek estimates that the Nubian ibex he already has in considerable number will bring $5,000 apiece on the international market.

"Six of the herd are pregnant now," he sald, "and they're getting better prenatal care than any other mother in Israel."
